- 5 sleeping

- 3 hanging out with my mates
- 2 playing on my computer/phone whenever I want
- 1 holiday wherever this is (and some of you are VERY lucky)

Playing on my computer/phone whenever I want

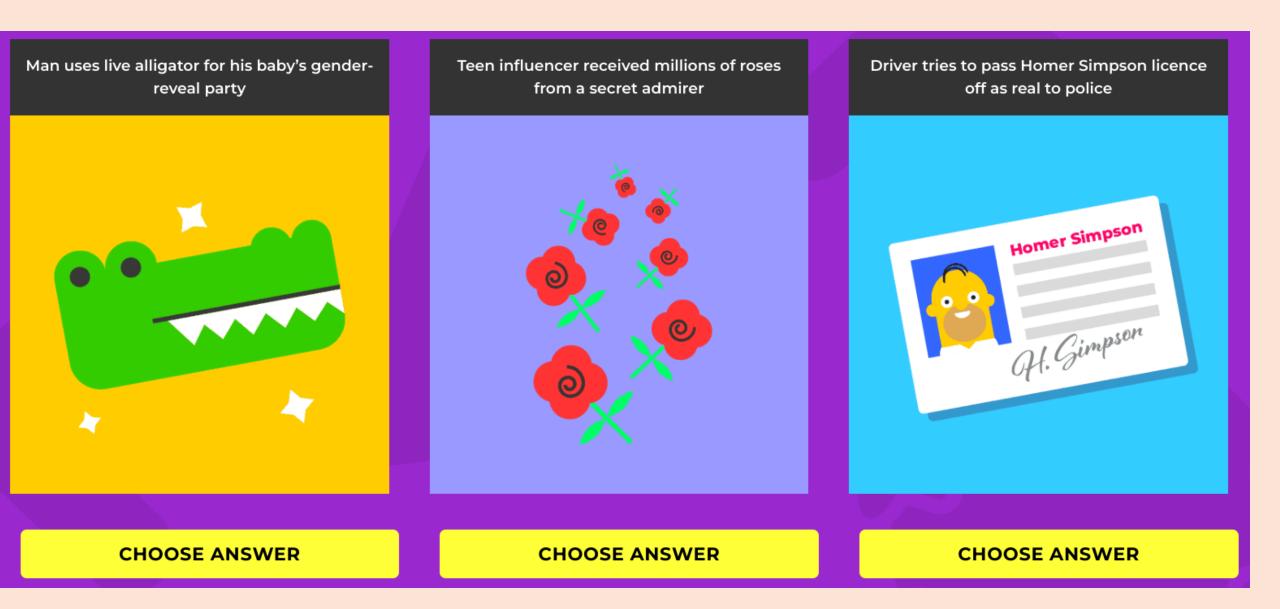

Teenagers from the age of 11 upwards spend on average 7.5 hours a day on a screen during the summer holidays.

What are we watching and reading?

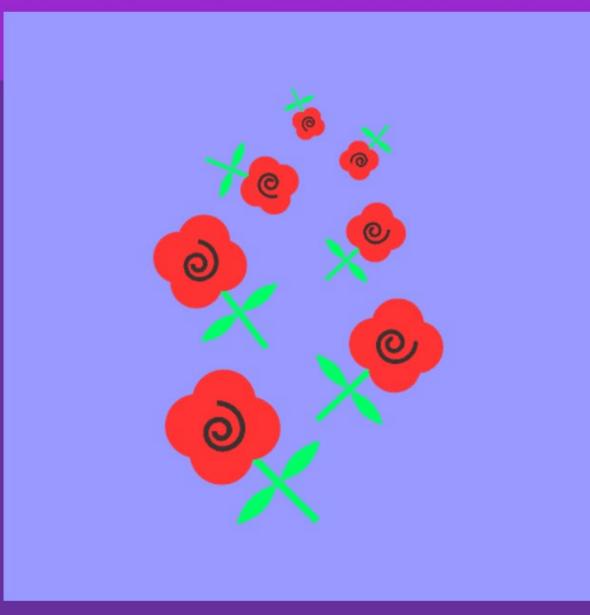

Mark Twain

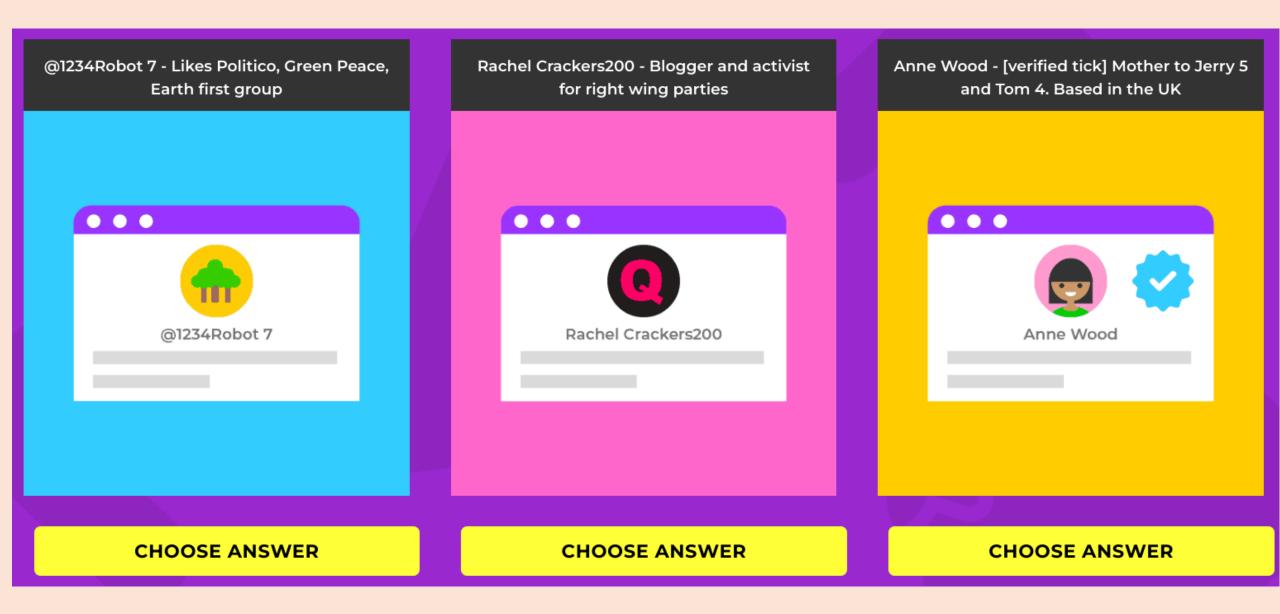

Congratulations if you got the correct answer! If not, there are a couple of practical things you can do to spot these misleading headlines:

- First, don't just read the headline. Read the whole story to get the full picture.
- Remember, if you have any doubts that something is true don't share it on social platforms to stop it from spreading and potentially confusing others.

Teen influencer received millions of roses from a secret admirer.

Here are some questions to ask yourself to check if an account is real or not.

Does the account share no personal information? Is it just focused on a cause or a particular view? Is the account linked to a group or an organisation rather than a person?

If yes, it might be a fake account.

Hanging out with my mates

- Ella has been talking online with Sophie for weeks when they're playing Fortnite.
- Since playing together, Ella's single match kills has doubled.
- Sophie suggests meeting up at the Discovery Centre at 9.00pm tomorrow.
- Ella has just sent you a message on snapchat to let you know about it...

- If you've been speaking to someone online for a while, you might decide it's time to meet face to face.
- Do not do this without following these guidelines:
- It is important to speak to your parent or carer first, before agreeing to meet up with someone, so they can help you to do this in a safe way.
- Here are some things you can do to make your first meeting safer:
 - \odot meet in a busy, public place
 - \circ meet during the day
 - \circ plan a safe journey
 - \odot keep in touch with your parent or carer
 - $\odot \, \text{ask}$ someone to go with you
- Anyone who genuinely wants to be your friend won't mind doing these things to make you feel safe.

Most importantly

- Whatever you are doing, tell your adults at home where you are going
- Have fun, but act at all times within the law!
- Don't take unnecessary risks
- Keep reading. Don't let your brain rot.
